Excerpt: .Congress at Frankfort, Germany, in 1850. In 1861 he was appointed, b President Lincoln, Consul at Bristol, Englan, which position he held for eight years. Mr. Eastman was, at the time of his death, the oldest of the practical printers of Chicago, and was the cotemporary of A. M. Talley, Carver Butterfield and many of the oldest members of the craft, now gone to their final rest. He was a man of strong convictions and had much to do with forming and energizing the anti-slavery sentiment of the eople of the northern part of this State, where the Republican rty was enabled to win t e triumph whicfia carried it to final victory in the election of Abraham Lincoln, in 1860. Notwithstandin the fervency of his zeal, he was always charita le to his opponents, and to his grave he carried the respect and...
