Excerpt: .higher alkalinity than Ph = 8.1, that is, nearly all surface waters, will gain CO_i from the air. Using artificial sea water with carbonates to make PH--8.2 and on satg. with air the value of Ph was reduced to 7.9 or 8.1. By measuring neutral sea waters containing known amts. of alkali and H_jco_i, it is seen that Ph = 8.1 in salt water corresponds with a ratio of about 1.08; any sea water containing less than 2.2/i.o8 = 2.04 millimols. of H_jco_j to 2.2 milli-equivalents of alkali should gain CO_j from the air. From direct exptl. results it is found that in a water of total alkalinity equal to 2.2 milli-equivalents the lowest ratio and the highest acidity that is normally encountered in sea water is in equil. with atmospheric CO_i, and that in all other cases the water will gain CO_j. Other means of maintaining alkalinity and varying the amts. of CO_j are taken up by the consideration of geochem. and biochem. factors. B. Fsubr Water-supply typhoid outbreak at Lansing, Michigan. J. R. Daugherty. Eng. News-Record 84, 92-4(1920).--The water supply of Lansing is obtained from 32 artesian wells, 350 to 400 ft. deep. At the time of high water in Grand River, March, 1919, the wells were polluted through leaky joints by sewage forced into the soil. Over 3000 cases of dysentery and 82 cases of typhoid occurred followed by n deaths. Chlorination of the supply was temporarily adopted. Frank Bachmann Rating of state...
