Excerpt: . . . 11 not subject to the review of our elected officials or of the court system. We have in place a system that demands from our Congress an open, transparent, and fair process to create rules. It demands review by the courts. It demands review by the Congress when appropriate. Federal agencies use standards that are developed in secret by outside groups, and federal employees participate in those standard-setting activities behind closed doors without giving all parties access to the information, the materials, the meetings, or the activities. Then they come back and create a standard in those private situations, and those standards are then incorporated by reference or used by the federal agencies and enforced. It avoids the openness, the transparency, the fairness and the judicial review thats available for standard setting as intended by this Congress. Its this part of the rulemaking system that I would like to focus on, the use of non-consensus standard-setting organizations. There are excellent standard-setting organizations that operate in the open, with consensus by all parties, and produce very important work to protect our country. The National Fire Protection Association, and the ANSI standards do a superb job. On the other hand, there are a couple of organizations that are directly incorporated by reference in our regulations. One of them is the American Conference of Governmental Industrial Hygienists, ACGIH. OSHAs rules and MSHAs rules incorporate by reference the standards that this organization produces. In the...
