

Competing Motivations in the Process of Language Change

By David Stehling

GRIN Verlag Dez 2012, 2012. sonst. Bücher. Book Condition: Neu. 210x148x1 mm. This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Seminar paper from the year 2010 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies - Linguistics, printed single-sided, grade: 2,0, (Institut für Anglistik/Amerikanistik), course: Historical Linguistics, language: English, abstract: Language change is a steadily continuing process. Languages were changing 2000 years ago. They are changing today and they will certainly be changing in the future. So we are able to determine different steps in the development of the English language: roughly speaking, Old English, Middle English, and Modern English. All of them are different from each other in terms of semantics, phonology, or morphology. In this manner, morphological and syntactic, phonological, lexical and semantic characteristics of a particular language are altering all the time. These processes may happen consciously or unconsciously. They may be perceived by the speakers of the respective language or they may be not. However, this process is always going on. Furthermore, there are lots of motivations causing those changes. As an example, the ambition to ease pronunciation that is, the reduction of effort that is necessary for moving the speech articulators causes changes...

READ ONLINE
[3.95 MB]

Reviews

Merely no words to explain. I really could comprehend everything out of this published e book. I found out this publication from my dad and i suggested this publication to learn.

-- Prof. Margarita Ledner PhD

This written pdf is fantastic. It normally is not going to expense a lot of. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

-- Gilbert Stroman