And I am to remind you that that shout, which fills the universe with its tones of glory and of most hallowed joy, could never have proceeded from the lips of unfallen beings. That song is the song of the fallen restored, of the lost found. It is the song of victory after conflicts, of joy after sorrow, of good triumphant over evil. Those harps are attuned to one theme, --the hymn of redemption from sin and death; their chords are resonant with the harmony of reconciliation: Behold,...
